

MELIKA SALIHBEG BOSNAWI

GAZZA, A FORGOTTEN LAND

is seventh story/dream out of the twelve, making a novel called CATHARTIC DREAMS / YÂ FILISTÎN.

The book was issued in Bosnia&Hercegovina, in 1991, more than two years after the start of its writing, preceded by the years of research and preparations.

Considerable part of "the raw material" for writing the story as well as the whole novel was taken from many a microfilms of the world newspapers issued between beginning of the 20th century and 1988. It was an extremely exhausting work from morning until late in the night, in the Library of Congress, Washington D.C., during the time of my own political exile and roaming the globe.

Alas, the said wandering did not include dear Palestine except in the cathartic dreams of people and things related to her – a sad lot!

What is creepy here is actuality of the present story. Its pages seem as being just jot down by the Evil performer of the current persecutions, destructions, deaths . . . , with small Palestinian kids as a specialty of the Big Cook.
