

FOR A MUCH, NO NEED OF A LITTLE

- AKI NAWAZ

There should be a certain nobleness in jihad. Yet after all the people I've met, it became clear to me that out of a hundred fighters there's maybe ten or fifteen people that are actually noble, dignified and decent in their hearts. Most of the others are just like the English here. They don't have the spirit of true resistance. Neither do they have the spirit of humbleness or mercy. They forget that the Qur'an only allows to defend yourself, but not to transgress. People like Osama Bin Laden don't realize the limits of transgression. Had he done that, there might have been a real shift. But when Al Qaeda looks at the world now, what did it achieve? More Muslims have been killed and there's more resentment. It has been magnified. The response of the West as well. So now there are two terrorists: the Muslim terrorists and the West.

So now there are two terrorists: the Muslim terrorists and the West.
now there are two terrorists: the Muslim terrorists and the West.
there are two terrorists: the Muslim terrorists and the West.
two terrorists: the Muslim terrorists and the West.
the Muslim terrorists and the West.
terrorists and the West.
the West.

FOR A MUCH, THERE IS NOT NEED OF A LITTLE!